FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Design Group Exhibits installs acousti-Art panels at LaGrange High School

LaGrange, GA – Design Group Exhibits’ division of acousti-Art recently installed graphic acoustical panels at LaGrange High School.

acousti-Art panels were designed and developed by Design Group Exhibits in 2009. The acoustical panels meet NRC standards for noise reduction. They also provide graphic options, which are aesthetically pleasing, while providing much needed noise reduction.

With the expansion and renovation of the LaGrange High School cafeteria, LaGrange High School, Principal Steve Cole knew that increased noise was going to be a factor. Design Group Exhibits and acousti-Art were approached by Torrance Construction during the bid process to provide an acoustical solution for the school’s renovations.

“The panels are beyond what any of us really expected or could have imagined when we first met to talk about the project. There is no doubt they totally change the dynamics of our cafeteria and add the final touch to what we think is an extraordinary renovation project,” says Steve Cole, Principal of LaGrange High School. “All are even more impressed when they learn that the graphics are simply a bonus and that the main purpose of the panel is an acoustical application.”

“We are also very impressed with the overall acoustical plan. We recognize a tremendous difference in the noise level in the cafeteria even though we have increased the number of students we are accommodating during each of our lunch periods. There simply is no comparison in the noise level,” says Mr. Cole.

Design Group Exhibits’ acousti-Art division recently attended GASFA (Georgia...) in Savannah. The LaGrange High School project has been the catalyst for other schools wanting the same type of solution.
